"Electro-Milk" Only is Pure

Dr. Mackall Strongly Advocates Introduction of New Progress.

"Absolutely the only pure milk sold anywhere in the world is that sterilized by the electric process," said City Physician Mackall of Honolulu recently. "I have been studying the process closely and have seen it in operation in New York, and I know what I am talking about. I understand that the Dairymen's Association is figuring on installing this process. If it does, it will be one of the best things for the city that ever happened."

"Milk," said Doctor Mackall, "is next to bread, the principal food product of the world. It is usually consumed in an uncooked state, which makes it all the more dangerous if it is impure. Dirt is liable to get into it from the clothing of the employees of the dairies, from hog pens, horse barns, or swill barrels. I really consider that all dairy employees should be obliged to wear white clothing, as this would be washed when it became soiled, while colored clothes may be worn for months with all their accumulation of germs. Another source of impurity in milk is the dirty hands of the milkers."

"Many epidemics of the zymotic diseases are caused primarily by the use of impure milk—diseases such as typhoid fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria. These usually originate from the water supply or through sickness among those working on the dairies. Also, diseases of the udder, such as tuberculosis, are frequently transmitted in milk."

"Some bacteria from acids and gases; among them is the lactic acid bacteria, which causes souring of the milk by breaking up the milk sugar into lactic acid. These can be killed by a low temperature, as they do not have spores. They are usually introduced into the milk by dust and pieces of hair. Diarrhea and vomiting are caused by the acids formed as a result of fermentation changes."

"A heavy mortality results from the use of impure milk and everything that could be done to diminish the sale of milk that is not pure tends to increase the healthfulness of the community."

Dr. Mackall explains that pasteurization only partially purifies milk. It destroys part of the bacteria, but not all of them. Sterilization, on the other hand, destroys all the bacteria. It is much harder, however, to destroy the spores than it is the bacteria, long and continued heating usually being required. It may take three or four days to sterilize milk by heat, and this is manifestly impracticable.

Pasteurized milk requires great care in handling, and the bacteria grow faster after the milk has once been pasteurized. Pasteurized milk is usually unpleasant to the taste and difficult, if not impossible, to sell.

"The Goucher electric process of sterilizing milk," says Doctor Mackall, "insures absolute sterility. The component parts of the milk are maintained, its digestive powers increased, and its flavor improved. The process consists in passing the milk first through sterilized cotton batting to remove foreign impurities, and then exposing it to an electric current of high potentiality. The product is absolutely free of bacteria, spores and all other organisms. The cream is heavier, and the digestive properties and taste are improved."

"The process is one requiring very expensive machinery, but if the Dairymen's Association, or any other dairy, introduces the process, it will mean that every dairy on Oahu will have to take steps to have its milk sterilized by the same process. 'Electromilk' is sold in New York, where it is fast driving everything else off the market. I hope we shall get the process here, for it will greatly improve the health of the community."

Crosses Sea For Saddle

Cattle Raiser Makes Long Trip From Hawaii.

All the way from Hawaii to Los Angeles for a saddle! Not many people would make the journey for no other purpose. The one who would and did arrived yesterday morning, and left yesterday evening on the Owl for San Francisco, to sail as soon as possible for his home in Maui.

L. Von Tempesky, one of the biggest cattle raisers in the islands, whose ranch is at Haleakala, is the man—a bluff, hearty individual, in an English tourist's suit and cap. No white collar decorated the neck or set off the deeply-burned face of the traveler. A soft collar of cream color and pink stripe, bordered by the edges of a heavily-tied maroon four-in-hand, seemed just the thing for him.

"My business isn't any of your business," he remarked, with a twinkle in his blue eye, which rested beneath a heavy gray fringe of eyelash.

"I came over to get a saddle," he continued, in answer to a question. "You see, our horses have roach-backs—you call them sway-backs over here—and the ordinary American saddle fits them at both ends, just like putting a pole from one bank to another of a ditch."

Surprise was expressed that he came all the way to Los Angeles just for a saddle.

"No, I came to get several saddles of the same kind, if you must know. Feel better now? I've been doing business with one firm in this City for a good many years, and so here I am, and, by the way, here I go. Got to catch the Owl in half an hour. Good-bye."

The traveler's father was a soldier of fortune, Count von Tempesky of Portland, who, after the downfall of his own country, fought under many flags and was finally killed in an engagement with the Maoris.

It was in that country that the son was born. His mother was an English woman of gentle blood. The son, inheriting the spirit of his father, has wandered over the face of the earth for many years.

In his journeys he arrived in Hawaii and finally landed on Maui. Here he acquired one of the largest single land areas of the island and proceeded to raise cattle. He has been raising cattle for years, and, as a result, is reputed to be very wealthy.—LOS ANGELES TIMES.

Iao More Beautiful Than New Zealand.

"These Islands contain the most beautiful scenery I have ever seen," declared Sydney Hobson on his return from a highly successful six weeks' concert tour of Hawaii and Maui, says the Advertiser.

"I have always placed Milford Sound in New Zealand first in exquisite scenery, but last week when I gazed from the tableland in Iao Valley on that superb range of mountains piercing the clouds, densely clothed in every glory of green, with long waterfalls pouring down, and with a swollen torrent rushing along at my feet with deafening roar, I changed my mind, and henceforward the Iao Valley will stand in my mind for the most perfect beauty. One can not imagine anything more beautiful. And yet people told me that on the other side of Maui there was still finer scenery."

Electricity For Wailuku

Wailuku Electric Light Company Will Build Plant Immediately.

For many months the residents of this section of Maui have been kept on the qui vive over announced improvements in the lighting arrangements, which never materialized, until now, if one is heard talking about electricity he is looked at sideways.

When the Wailuku Electric Company first received their charter it was intended to install a large plant suitable for light and power. It was thought, at that time that Kahului would have a large wharf where the American Hawaiian freight steamers would receive their freight from elevators operated by electricity. When that scheme fell through, however, it was found necessary to readjust the plans to suit new conditions. No sooner had the new plans been perfected when it was learned that the Kahului railroad had made arrangements for securing electric power from the pumping plant of the H. C. & S. Co.'s molasses tank. This change placed the electric company in the same position as they had been before they started.

This time however, the company think they have got down to an absolutely sure working bases, and are going ahead on a lighting plant only. It is intended to install a 1000 light plant, and things have progressed so far along this line, that it is expected actual work on the plant will be begun in a short time. The Kahului railroad will wire and install lights in Kahului, working under the charter of the Wailuku Electric Co., after which the whole system will be taken over by the latter. It is the intention of the company to push things along rapidly from now on, so that the people of Wailuku and Kahului, may reasonably expect electricity both in their homes and on the street within six months.

Judge Rogers Passes Away

Impressive Services Held in the Union Church and at the Grave.

Judge E. H. Rogers, late District Magistrate of Lahaina, was born in Wailuku, August 7, 1878. He was educated in the Wailuku public school and in the Hilo Boarding School for boys.

In 1897 he entered the Wailuku police force under Sheriff L. M. Baldwin and, through faithfulness to his duties, was promoted to be the Sheriff's Clerk, an office he retained under Sheriff Saffery until commissioned district magistrate for Lahaina in April, 1909.

Being a consumptive his friends hoped a change of residence to Lahaina would benefit his health, which did improve for a year; but shortly after moving into the new residence he had built for himself last July, a recurrence of his old troubles came on resulting in several severe hemorrhages until the attending physician declared his case to be hopeless. The end came Wednesday, August 31, 1910, and his body was brought over to Wailuku.

Reverends R. B. Dodge and L. B. Kaumeheie conducted the funeral service at the Wailuku Union Church, at which the deceased was a member, and at the Wailuku Cemetery where the interment took place in the family burial plot.

The funeral was a very large one, the procession being headed by the police, under Deputy Sheriff Clem Crowell, followed by the firemen under Jos. F. Welch, Chief Engineer.

E. H. Rogers married Ellen Brown, cousin of Mrs. W. T. Robinson in 1905, and leaves his widow and his two sisters, Miss Zelle Rogers and Mrs. F. Sommerfeld to mourn for him.

Exchange of Land at Hana.

The principal matter discussed by the advisory land board at its meeting last Monday, was an exchange of land between the Territory and the Kaeleku Sugar Company. The purpose of the exchange was to supply the town of Hana with public land for a park, school grounds and stable grounds. About 107 acres are involved in the transaction, the plantation obtaining by it land between Kawaipapa and Mokelelehu gulches.

Mr. Campbell explained that the motion for exchange came from the county board of supervisors, rather than the plantation, which, he understood, is not over anxious to see the deal go through.

Against this exchange an objection was filed with the board, and signed by Marion Cabral and fifteen others, asking that the Kawaipapa lands be opened to homesteading.

Kuhio Will Come To Maui Soon.

The News is in a position to state authoritatively that Delegate Kuhio will come to Maui, and will address the voters of this county.

While in Honolulu recently, a representative of the News saw Kuhio, and talked with him, and the Prince said if the people wanted him he would come, probably on his return from Hawaii. The Prince has a weak throat at present, thus making it necessary that he speak very little until the actual work of the Campaign commence. It is now up to the County Republican Committee to issue an official invitation, and arrange for Kuhio's reception when he comes to Maui.
